A Question

In Washington

Why Wally Hickel?

By E. W. Kenworthy WASHINGTON, May 8 (NYT).

-Why Wally Hickel? That is the question being asked in this capital city, How was it that Secretary of the interior Walt.: J. Hickel-a former governor of Alaska, a self-made millionaire, a heating an plumbing contractor, owner of s' pping centers, hotels and expensive housing developments — how was it that this man, so apparently square, should be the one member of the cabinet to write a letter to President Nixon saying bluntly that his ladministration was consciously alienating the young people of America by falling to communicate with them?

'It came right from the heart and it was meant for the President," said one Interior Department official today, a trusted advi or to the secretary.

He went on to express regret that the letter had somehow leaked to the press, but he added that, however much the White House might be angered by this leak and bowever much pressure was put on Mr. Hickel, he would not recant nor retreat fror his deeply held conviction that the leaders of the nation had an obligation "to communica. > with our youth and listen - to their ideas and problems." There was no doubt here, considering the risks to his political cureer, that Mr. Hickel had spoken from the heart. And there was not much doubt that he rould not recant-his stub--bornness is a byword.

Reserves of Conscience

But what hidden, unsuspected reserves of conscience had filled his heart to the point that he felt he must carry his dissent to the President? What influ-ences had reinforced his own feelings? What crents had pre-ceded the sending of the letter? To these questions, there came answers from some of Mr. Hickel's closest associates who spoke freely but not for attribu-

And their answers served to dispel some cynical rumors here that the letter had been stagemanaged by the White House, presumably in an effort to establish a belated presidential laison with the young people. One man who has long been close to the secretary gave this account yesterday of the genesis of the letter.

"First," he said, "there was Mr. Hickel's own feelings about the Vietnar war. He has been asingly turned off by it. He has said repeatedly [to friends] that if it comes to a choice between continuing the war in order to win it and the risk of increasing the contention in the country, with people set against people, Tm in favor of pulling out even if we lose it."

Secondly, he continued, Mr. Hickel has undoubtedly been considerably influenced by three young assistants—Malcolm Rob-crts, Michael Levett, a graduate of the University of California Law School at Los Angeles and a White House fellow on assignment to the Interior Department, and Pai Ryan, for-merly Mr. Hickel's special assistant when he was governor aid, have grave doubts about the administration's Victiam policy and all have a sympa-thetic understanding of the probler of the young. Mr. Levett, for example, was once an assistant to the former Sen. Ernest L. Gruening, D., Alaska, one of the earliest and most implacable critics of the war.

Pinalty, according to this informant, Mr. Hickel has talked with a large number of college students who came to the Inferior Department in connection with SCOPE—Student Council and Environment on Polintion and Environment-a program sponsored by the In-terior Department during the White House to the letter and its leaking, the side said, was one of anger. A White House one of anger. A White House assistant, it was related, called Mr. Ryan, the secretary's personal assistant, and said: "If you find the SOB responsible for leaking that letter I want you to fire him." Mr. Ryan was said to have, replied: "If you find the SOB responsible for not letting Hickel see the President, I want you to fire him." Yesterday afternoon, the Interior Department issued a statement saying that the department had been "swamped" with telegrams and telephone calls on the secretary's letter, and that the comments were "over-whelmingly favorable." There was one call that in-dicated that the White House was fully aware of the impact of the letter-and was attempting to convert the secretary's new popularity into a line of comnanication between the President and the young.

Presidential assistant John Erlichmann, it was learned, tele-phoned Mr. Hickel and said that he was "offering him another right arm—the Presi-

Some of the secretary's closest friends, however, are not sur-prised at his action. He has always been, they note, a man who had an affinity for young people. As governor, he put many of his bureaus under men in their late twenties or early

Mr. Hickel likes man-to-man dealings, and this, his friends say, accounts for his suggestion to the President Wednesday that "you consider meeting, on an individual and conversational basis, with members of your cabinet." He has seen the President privately only twice in 15 months.

Shift on Neutrality

From all indications, the idea of raiding the sanctuaries first arose as a matter for active consideration within the President's inner circle at a National Security Council meeting on April 22, only two days after Mr. Nixon had told the American people the war was going well in South Vietnam that he had ordered the withdrawal of an additional 150,000 American troops during the coming

Until then, the enemy's sanc-tuaries, where 40,000 troops were quartered as a constant threat to South Vietnam: where, it was believed, huge stocks of supplies the enemy high command operated, had been tolerated because of the neutrality of Cambodia.

American policy toward re-specting Cambodia's neutrality had been set so hard that Mr. Kissinger's National Security Council had never even bothere to make a detailed study of the country as it had of Laos, Vietnam and several other countries around the world.

"We just had no options for change in Cambodia," one State Department official said.

The fall of Prince Sihanouk and the rise of Gen. Lon Nol, who was anti-North Vietnamese, changed that Immediately, some factions in the American policy-making apparatus began lockeying for a revision in policy, while others sought to change Lon Nol's views to bring them more into line with Sihanouk's.

At first the administration leaned over backwards to preserve Cambodia's neutrality. It went to the extraordinary length of subtly but unmistakably encouraging Lon Nol to negotiate an agreement with Hanoi for preservation of the sanctuaries. Sihanouk had guaranteed the safety of the North Vietnamese troops and for years even allowed them to receive supplies via sea, although in his last months in office he had begun to get tougher. At the same time, the admin-istration put a tight rein on both American and South Vietnamese forces seeking to enter the sanctuaries. For years, they had been making clandestine excursions into Cambodia. These were stopped. So were unpublicized American bombing raids of the sanctuaries that Sinsnouk had been permitting.

The only break in this was an unauthorized raid by South Vietnamese troops on April I, which the United States dis avowed. Meanwhile Lon Nol's troops began elaughtering Viet-namese living in Cambodia and there grew more and more active.

But by mid-April, the situstion had begun to fall apart. South Vietnamese were moving across the border to raid Communist supply caches regularly in what had become a clandestine war. The North Vietnamese troops were moving out feared, even threatening to move on Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital. Lon Nol, now alarmed, appealed publicly to the world for military aid. To the United States, he made a very specific request. He asked for enough weapons and equipment to equip 200,000

He wanted more than half a billion dollars worth of arms. Certainly the United States could not have complied without sending advisers and technicians as well.

The administration instead sent about 3,000 Chinese-made AK-47 rifles which had been captured in South Vietnam. The request came in just as the President was planning his troop withdrawal announcement, a decision that was giving him equal concern. Under the best of conditions, the military has been against any withdrawals. Now, Gen. William C. Westmoreland, Army chief of staff, was arguing that the change in government in Cambodia presented a golden opportunity to solidify the process of Vietnamization by cleaning out the

No Longer 'Just a Few Militants," He Says

By Bernard D. Nossiter WASHINGTON, May 8 (WP)— Robert Finch, the Health, Ednca-tion and Welfare Secretary, said yesterday that campus unrest has reached the proportions of a "national crisis." He attributed it to the assaults in Cambodia, which he described as "the straw that broke the camel's back."

Mr. Finch made his observations to reporters after a private meeting with a delegation of 25 students and teachers from Stanford Uni-

These are, he went on, that the assaults are consistent with Vietnamization and will hasten the end of the war. "I wouldn't say that we made : sale to everyone," he acknowledged wryly. "We try."

Long Buildup

Mr. Finch doubted that President Nixon's description of college demonstrators as "burns" or the killing of four students at Kent State University had provoked the crisis. "This whole business has been building up for a long time," he said, and Cambodia was the catalyst.

April 22, the President and his advisers were extremely wor-ried. On top of everything else, the President was concerned about the appearance of Soviet fighter pilots in Egypt at the time that the North Vietnamese were threatening Cambodia.

By Monday night, April 27, all the arguments had been heard.

"I have never been through such a day in my life," Mr. Kissinger told an associate about the same time the President secluded himself in his hideaway office.

And still many in Washington knew nothing of the im-pending crisis. Even Mr. Kissinger did not know the President was making up his mind

Tuesday morning, Mr. Kissinger was still reviewing the situation with associates in case the President asked him for a formal recommendation. One of the factors weighing heavily on his mind was the depth of the reaction he foresaw in the colleges.

The President is known to have thought he could make the invasion palatable to the American people by saying it was only temporary, that the American troops would be withdrawn when the operation had ended in six or eight weeks'

He failed to reckon with the fact that Americans had heard such promises before about the Vietnam war and were no longer so credulous.

U.S. to Deport Topless Dancer

WASHINGTON, May 8 (UPI).-The government plans to deport a topless dancer who once earned $750 a week and allegedly paid a U.S. citizen to marry her so she could stay in this country.

The Board of Immigration Appeals cleared the way yesterday for the deportation of Yvonne Dangers, a topless dancer at Ceasar's Palace in Las Vegas, in 1966, to her native Iran or France.

There was testimony she married an American, paid him $100 when they married and another $100 when they were divorced nine months later. She never lived with him.

evaluated your goals in the last .

· If you haven't done either, you aren't very smart or in a rut. What is your reaction to a facinating, highly rewarding, but incredibly challenging job where you make your own future while you plan other people's?

That is basically what investment sales are all about. That's the job. Changing people's lives... satisfying a simple need by showing them how to provide for the future through investing. And your future will be just as successful as theirs, because it is measured by your ability. Exactly.

We are Investors Capital Trust, sponsors and international distributors of The Dollar Fund, Fund of New York, Realstock Real Estate Stock Fund N.V., Fund of Nations and associated insurance policies all offered through a variety of investment programs.

We know our goals and future. We might have both for you. Please write our sales director and we'll both find out. Our commission and benefit packages are excellent. Advancement opportunities—unusual.

THE ART MARKET.

A Rare Insight Into 'The Strange Life of Objects'

By Souren Melikian

L ONDON.—Once upon a time, there was a French nobleman who was given the task of helping Spain build a great army. And when he had finished, the King of Spain was so happy that he wanted to reward the Frenchman

A story book adventure such as this, spanning two centuries. lies behind the arrival in the sales rooms of Christie's, the London art auctioneers, of a unique desk which illustrates fully the craftsmanship of Jacques Dubois. The French nobleman was the Marquis de Vallière. When King Charles III was trying to streamline Spain's somewhat shoddy army he begged King Louis XV of France to send him military experts, and the Marquis, a brilliant artillery specialist and engineer, was seot to Madrid. Apparently, the Marquis did such a good job that King Charles insisted on rewarding him, but the Frenchman would not accept money.

He could find no excuse. of a magnificent lacquer secrétaire which King Charles had ordered, tactfully, from the best French cabinet maker he could think of-Jacques Dubois.

Seldom does one see the property of such famous people as Lord Rothschild and Lord Hillingdon coming up for sale on the same floor, and this fact alone should excite collectors. And for those interested merely in the history of art, this sale should provide a fascinating glimpse of what French auc-Honcer Maurice Rheims has called "the strange life of obleets."

Dubois gave the best of his craft to the desk commissioned by King Charles for the Mar-quis de Vallière. As fashion demanded, he made an elegant writing destk in very soher ro-coco style, decorated with imitation Japanese black and gold lacquerwork. The folding top, three front drawers, slightly bombé sides and back, all had landscapes in pure Japanese style with the precise color shade and subtle relief so characteristic of Japanese lacquer. Only the crackle in the lacquer betrayed its European origin. The desk was mounted with chased ormoln worked with shell ornament, foliage sprays, scrolls and matting. Naturally, Dubois left his mark on such a fine piece -modestly tucking it inside the knee arch. The bronze-maker left his tactful mark, with a crowned "C" on the hinges, inkwell and other flat

The Marquis did not live long to enjoy his gift, and his daughter, Charlotte de Vallière, inherited the desk. Despite the continued friendship of the King of Spain for her family, Charlotte's aristocratic background landed her in prison during the great upheaval of 1789. But she married a commoner named Bobierre while in fail and escaped the fate of many of her peers.

The precious secrétaire meanwhile, rested safely at the family seat, the Chatean d'Alincourt in Magny-en-Vexin. When the first French Empire came into being, and noblity resumed its place in society. Charlotte's daughter proudly called herself Boblerre de Vallière. And when she married a French general who had just been elevated to Baron Remond by the Emperor, the desk was part of her dowry. Two generations slipped by until it became the property of a direct descendant called Geneviève Giran. Then, on her death in 1965, it passed to ber daughter, Renée, now Madame Wilhem Lebrix de le Salla, who has removed it from the family seat for the first time in 200 years, and put it up for sale.

Twelve other items included in the sale come almost as much of a surprise. They belong to Lord Hillingdon, whose some of the best furniture now contained in the Kress collection in the United States. But all the best pieces had not been sold By an odd coincidence these items include a fine, small tulipwood secrétaire à abattant which was made by René Duools, the son of Jacques Dubois who made the Vallière bureau. Both father and son used the same stamp (J. Dubois), but Anthony Coleridge, Christie's expert on the subject, says the work. Visitors to the sale will have an opportunity to judge the talents of father and son. Another masterpiece offered y ford Hillingdon is a cardtable by Jean-François Oeben, the German-born French cabi-

The sale of continental silver and gold, also at Christie's, on Wednesday, May 13, will be one of the finest of its kind yet held in London. It offers a rare chance for connoisseurs to see how cosmopolitan European artists and craftsmen had beome shout the middle of the 18th century.

The gem of this sale—a solid

Another example is a Dutch tankard, 3 1/2 inches high, made by Johannes Stotteling of Amsterdam 'n 1767. The shape is English, and the floral garland is French.

By the end of the century Holland had turned completely to England for inspiration. A delightful circular biscuit box and a rectangular one made to go with it by Barend van Meckelenburg, in Amsterdam in 1787 are a true reflection of Adamesine taste.

While Italy was at that time obsessed by Prance, the taste for silver in Finland was swedish. The silversmith who made a fine parcel-gilt beaker

Jean Duty: Forced throughout his life (1888-1964) under the spell of Raoul, who was 11 years older, and the watercolor by Jean included in the sale is dated 1924 the time when Jean had fully mastered his brother's style.

Jean had a powerful brushstroke, which indicates talent in painting, but little aptitude for cutting a new style or even new compositions, which are the mark of creative genius. Racul was his teacher and he literally infused his technique and artistic vision into Jean's. work. So here is an almost unique case of an artist working virtually with two pairs of

Jean's work, of which Raoul thought quite highly, has long been underrated. It was only quite recently that Jean's work jumped over the $1,000 barrier. His watercolors, in particular, can be good and, because they are sketches freely drawn, show him at his best. Since his work is so inexpensive now, it can probably be rated as a good

May 16. The paintings of Joseph Czapski reveal an eye for the incongruous, a sense of satire, a feeling for the lonelines; glimpsed fleetingly in stations or cafés that convey a dull ache of anguish but sometimes, too provoke what might be called a twinge of amusement. Czapski favors resolutely off-center framing, and colors that are both flat and scid. He is some. thing of an expressionist working occasionally (as he remarks) with the vocabulary of pop. The exhibition include some still lifes but it is in the caustic, humorous or pathetic view that his insight is beexpressed.

To the relatively conventional who finds his subjects in na-ture and the visible world. Those great hunks of stone are cliffs of course except where they become a reclining woman, or maybe a couple locked in embrace, or possibly a felled tree. That other piece is a helmet, although it could be the mushroom shape of an atomic explosion, or maybe the opposite of death, a womb enclosing a fetus. Polonius didn't see more in that cloud than viewers find in each of Henry Moore's sculp-

Psychoanalysis and Adolescence

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss CANNES, May 8.-Czech psychoanalytical fantasy and adolescent Swedish bewilderment were offered in today's films competing in the Cannes Festival.

"Le Pruit de Paradis," shown this evening, is the work of the avant-garde Czech woman director, Vera Chitylova. Whose "Les Petites Marguerites," a wild, slapstick account of the adventures of two teen-age Prague gold-diggers, was long detained by the Czech censors hefore its release abroad. It made Miss Chitylova and idol of the cine-clubs, and her new film is a Czech-Belgian co-production which she terms "a naive comedy," a morality piece posing the question: "Can one hear the truth?" At a press conference she denied that there are any political implications in her latest motion picture and certainly it seems to have nothing to do with current events.

It opens with a prologue in Eden, showing Adam and Eve devouring the forbidden fruit and heing cast out of the Garden. Thereafter we are more or less in 1970, at a luxurious resort hotel in the country and in the sesside forest that surrounds it. Eve has a husband called Joseph and when he proves fickle ehe is drawn to

The fall of Eve remains stubbornly ambiguous as nar-rative, but it is filled with detectable Freudian high-signsthe loss of the key in the sands, for example—and emerges as a sort of anxiety nightmare, a kaleidoscope of feminine fears and desires. Miss Chitylova is an arresting cinematic stylist and though her scenario remains mysterious in both design and content, there is brilliance in its vivid movement and pictorial composition. An evaluation of its acting is impossible, as it is never certain exactly what the players are interpreting. It is a director's picture.

The Swedish entry, "Harry Munter." is as confused in its plot maneuvers as the mooning. young lad it appoints as its hero. He is a problem to his prosaic parents and he soon becomes a problem for the spec-tator. A promising inventor, he rejects an offer from an American industrial firm to come to the United States and complete his studies. He prefers to remain at home, playing the Good Samaritan, seeking to protect a strange streetgirl from a brutal pimp, and passing out his pocket money to a sickly old man. Neither he nor the scenario can communicate any message, though his yearning idealism is suggested in a sequence in which he beholds the world as it might be, happy and in waltz time. Kjell Grede's work as hoth director and author suffers from a fatal vagueness. Jan Nielsen as the hoy, Carl-Gustaf Lindstedt as his father, Gum Jonsson as his mother and Elina Salo as the girl who fears her protector do well, but the main figure of the youth is never brought into sympathetic focus.

"Le Territoire des Autres," a documentary of wildlife, photographed by François Bel and Gerard Vienne, is a beautiful and entertaining film. Deserving of high honors, it was shown out of competition this afternoon to a packed and enthusiastic house. It is a companion piece of Christian Zuber's "Let Them Live" of last year. Like it, it posseses

War's Changing Aspect

The 25th anniversary of VE Day was celebrated in the United States chiefly by protests against a new war. Perhaps the irony was not as great as in November, 1943. when the quarter-centenary of the end of World War I was largely overlooked by Allied troops bogged down before Monte Cassino. by American Marines fighting on Bougainville, and Soviet tank crews ranging toward the borders lost to Hitler two years before. Bnt the irony was there, and so too was a marked change in the aspect of war in World War II was not followed by massive disillusionment that the obscure goals. the etupid generalship, the long, vain bloodletting of World War I had brought in its train. There were real evils, great evils, to be fought in the second global conflict, and for all the careless use of words like fascism, genocide and imperialism, used by those who did not experience the genuine articles, it is not that particular struggle which inspires today's widespread hatred of war. Nor is it wholly the threat of nuclear destruction for humanity, a new and very powerful argument against major war, that moves the marching throngs. Rather, it is a more intimate and detailed knowledge of war itself, acquired, to a degree unknown to any previous generation. while the fighting actually proceeds. The knowledge is vivid, too, distributed through the urgent medium of television, rather than by some work of art or fact, emerging after the censorship and the mood of patriotic fervor had lifted. One can see, today, the faces of the dead, the burned villages, the drawn tense expressions of the fightersand there are ample words freely spoken, written and published, to eke out the immediacy of those pictured impressions.

In this white light, old definitions of national interest, of political goals to be achieved by force, even of courage and duty, are seen in a quite different form. It is brought home by civilians, to the back areas, to the millions who in previous wars, knew only incidental hardship and occasional fear, how death on the battlefield really looks and the actuality of the human sacrifice war demands

That this may be a selective view; that, in the nature of things it emphasizes death without explanation, one side of the struggle; that it may have its own impact npon the unstable, its own terrible attraction; that, in fact, it does produce its own counter-violence-none of these affect the basic fact that war has changed its face for a vast multitude throughout a large portion of the world, and it is good to face reality. Bnt what of that other multitude which has not been exposed to the sights and sounds of war, and which still cherishes force as a means to ends it considers noble? One of the great tragedies of the thirtles was that disillusionment with war was not universal; that demagogues could still rally the youth of their lands to war as a virile ideal, for fuehrer, duce, or bushido. Has this disparity vanished today?

The loss of faith by countless thousands of young Americans in their government will not be easily remedied. More is required than President Nixon's promise that he and his associates will henceforth refrain from hostile comments on campus personalities and events. Students deeply concerned about issues of war and human dignity are not likely to be satisfied by reluctant silence or benign neglect,

The break between them and the administration moved toward irretrievability last year, when Mr. Nixon said he would not be influenced by their mass outcry against the war. This policy of deafness to the voices of concern eventually led to the tragedy of Kent State University.

The insensate violence of a radical fringe on campus should not obscure the extent to which the administration's intransigence and verbal provocations have driven great numbers of moderate students from frustration to radical activism. The resignation of Anthony Moffett from his liaison post between the government and American youth underscored those frustrations, particularly Mr. Moffett's declaration that he could no longer serve an administration bent on discrediting nonviolent protest.

But the task of rescuing the nation'e young from their growing disaffection cannot be abandoned. The increasing resort to violence by some students is not only morally and legally unacceptable; it is a self-destructive drive toward even greater personal tragedies and ultimately toward wholesale repression. By alienating many who chare the students' quest for peace, it scatters and defeats the antiwar forces.

The continuing contagion of strikes and university shntdowns, divorced from any specific acts directed at a speedy end of the war, obscures the academic community's indispensable role of keeping alive rational inquiry and debate. There must be, as Kingman Brewster jr., of Yale University, has said, a less irrational way of shaking the political system to its senses than to curtail

There are better ways. The direct pressure of appeals made to the White Honse by university presidents and student leaders can be reinforced by similar efforts to sway other important figures in the administration and on Capitol Hill. Individual students and faculty members can organize sustained nonviolent campaigns of education and persuasion in their own communities. They can make their voices heard in support of candidates committed to making the Con- as be misjudged the opposition to gress a force for peace abroad and concilia- his adventure in Cambodia, and tion at home. They can put their research this raises questions not only about skills to work in a massive drive against the politics of unreason and deceit.

Theirs could be a powerful political force. Mayor Lindsay, Sens. McGovern and Hatfield and many others stand ready to work with friends in the cabinet. He has been them. Rep. Frank Horton, Republican of New York, announced that students have persuaded him to abandon his support of the administration's Indochina policy.

The President and those who isolate him from the realities of the national mood may still believe that the doubts and anxieties of the young can be ignored. They are not nearly so likely to ignore their volces if they begin to speak through the electorate.

But the students draw much of their strength from the fact of being etudents. part of the academic community. Even so late in the academic year, there is greater symbolic value in keeping the universities open than in letting their lights go out. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

U.S. Policy in Indochina

While the rationale behind President Nixon's speech on Cambodia can be understood, experience should by now have taught the Americans that the worst way to ensure peace is to hunt for it with a gun.

The American involvement in Cambodia, far from containing the war in Southeast Asia, will spread it further.

Noble Phrases. . . and Facts

What made the invasion of Czecboslovakia so originally absurd and so impossible to justify was that it rested on the flimsy hypothesis that developments in that country might possibly ba leading toward a defection from the [Warsaw Pact] alliance. If an invasion and occupation can be justified on such a pretext, it opens the door to preventive strikes and intervention of ali sorts. It makes a mockery of sovereignty and of civilized international behavior. The fact is that Moscow cannot have it both ways. If it really wants a European security conference containing noble phrases about sovereignty and the inviolability of postwar frontiers, it will have to decide whether it is really ready to accept the possible impilcations within its own alliance. Otherwise the conference would merely be playing with words. One reason why the Western powers should show interest in such a conference is that it would provide an opportunity to confront the Soviet Union with this choice.

-From the Times (London).

Victims of Anarchy

The four students gunned down at Kent State are not martyre to the protest movement, nor martyrs to peace in Vietnam, nor martyrs to any cause. They are-God help us victims. Victims of trigger-happy violence in a land whose frontier history opens with the words: "In the beginning was the gun . . ." Victims of anarchy in a campus world where dedicated revolutionaries are ready to exploit student idealists as cannon fodder. America is in torment, its great spirit wracked by the terrible tensions of war. Revolutionary hate is answered by presidential insult. Only the lovers of revolution bave cause to rejoice.

Who Advises the President?

By James Reston

WASHINGTON, - One of the administrations, Nixon has isolated getting the facts before he moves, most surprising things about ed himself with a few members the violent opposition in the Conof his White House staff, and foilowed the advice of Attorney Gengress and the universities to the eral Mitchell and Vice-President invasion of Cambodia is that President Nixon was genuinely surprised Agnew.

He was forewarned time and again by his own people about what would happen if he invaded Cambodia, but he was estonished when the warnings came true, and this not the first time. He misjudged the opposition to his Supreme Court nominations of Judges Haynsworth and Carswell as much his personal judgment, but about where be is getting the advice he chooses to follow.

Paradoxically, his decisive advice not coming from his oldest closer personally to William Rogers, his secretary of state, and to Robert Finch, his secretary of health, education and welfare, over tbe last 15 or 20 years than to anybody else in his cabinet or ou his White House staff, but there is no evidence that they are his principal advisers on foreign or domestle affairs. In fact, they are probably more unhappy about the present plight of the administration than anybody else in Washington.

War Protests

I have lived in Madrid for the past several years and recognize the fact that complete awareness of events in the United States is lacking among Americans abroad. I felt it my duty, therefore, to explain the present situation which exists in universities across the nation, a situation which has been misconstrued by a great portion of the non-student population.

Here at Mount Holyoke, a women's liberal arts college, students recently voted for an open-ended strike, a suspension of normal activities in order to devote more time to political action concerning

U.S. military expansion into Cambodia. Since that time, numerous constructive activities have been organized. Letter-writing cam-

Hickel's Complaint

Thus, by the accident of a newspaper "leak," we now find Secretary of Interior Walter J. Hickel complaining in a private letter to the President that the administration appears to lack an appropriate concern for the attitude of young Americans, and appealing to the President to keep in touch with his own cabinet.

"Permit me to suggest," Secretary meeting, on an individual and couversational basis, with members of your cabinet. Perhaps through such conversations, we can gain greater insight into the problems confrouting us all ...

This helps explain what has been going ou here behind the scenes. The President, for all his talk of "team-work," has not been using. to the full bis cabinet, whose members are in touch with the realities of the problems in their areas of responsibility, but has increasingly been closeted with his White House staff, who are more isolated from the people at bome and abroad than almost anybody else in the administration.

The result is that the President now finds himself precisely where he said he would not be: isolated from the great intellectual ferments of his time, and even from his own dissenting cabinet members, and acting on assumptions which turn out to be false.

in South Vietnam. In short, the President seemed to have it in mind to pull American troops out and still "win." That was the significance of his repeated warnings against "defeat" and "humiliation."

On the face of it, the two objectives were inconsistent. If we could not make the writ of the. Thieu-Ky government run with 500,000 American soldiers, how could we expect to secure that aim as we withdrew? The administration's answer, the Greater future income can be the goal of a $5,000 portfolio placed under management now

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward more iocome, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals. Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground due to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danferth Associates Investment Management Plan, It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recognized and the behalf of the people who recognized the people who rec nize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year.

For a complimentary copy of a 42-page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you onw, simply write Dept. L-75.

MILITARY JUSTICE IS TO JUSTICE AS MILITARY MUSIC IS TO MUSIC By Robert Sherrill. 234 pp. New York: Harper & Row. $5.50

Reviewed by Edward F. Sherman tary in a democracy, the racial ISING Clemenceau's barbed comment on military justice for his title and theme, Robert Sherrill has written an immensely readable critique of the way the military dispenses justice. In the muckraking tradition, Sherrill provides a vivid account of outrageous conditions and abuses, strewn with examples of widespread brutality and sadism in military stockades, command domination of trials, and denial of individual rights of servicemen. The importance of his book is not so much in exposing these conditions—for they have filter-ed into the press over the last couple of years—but in indicating how extensive they are and in challenging the basic fea-tures of the military justice system which permit them to continue.

Sherrill focuses especially on three courts-martial which have demonstrated the inadequacies of military justice in the Viet-nam war period—the Presidio mutiny trials, the court-martial of Capt. Howard Levy, and the court-martial of Lt. Henry Howe. The Presidio mutiny trials in the spring of 1969 involved 27 young men who participated in a peaceful sit-down strike at the Presidio stockade in an attempt to present grievances concerning stockade conditions and the fatal shooting of a prisoner by a guard. They were all court-martialed for mutiny, and the first three tried were sentenced to 15, 14 and 16 years (later cut to two years in an unprecedented move by the Department of the Army after public and congressional criticism). The Presidio cases are a good example of what is wrong with military justice. Stockade conditions were woefully inadequate: there was overcrowding, food rations were short, sanita-tion was defective, guard brutality was rampant, and, despite military regulations, there were no effective means of redress. Then, the prisoners' abortive attempt to present grievances was treated as one of the most serious of military crimes, mutiny, a sobering reminder of the stunted view of free-speech rights in the military. Finally. the desire of the commanding general to show other commanders how to handle demonstrations had a significant effect on the proceedings, from his deci-sion to overrule the finding of a lawyer investigating officer that there was no evidence of muthy to the severe sentences handed down by his officers. It was an example, as Sherrill notes, of enormous overkill.

The court-martial of Capt. Levy in 1967 for refusing to teach medicine to Green Berets and for "conduct unbecoming an officer" in criticizing the Vietnam war raised another set of problems with military justice. It appears that Levy was given the order to teach Green Berets in the hopes that he might have moral qualms and disobey it and that court-martial was only taken because of his political views. The Levy case had all the elements of a political trial, and Sherrill perceptively notes the similarities the Dreyfus affair — the struggle between differing conceptions of the role of the miliundercurrents, and the use of secret intelligence dossiers. Levy's defense was based pri-marily on medical ethics (he claimed that non-doctor Green Berets were to be trained to use drugs and other medical techniques indiscriminately among the Vietnamese for and tactical purposes), but the law officer ruled that if Leve could prove the Green Bered were committing war crimes, h could raise a Nuremberg de fense to the order. Sheren maintains that Levy's evidence established that the Greek Berets had committed crime prohibited by the Law of Land Warfare (i.c., unnecessary struction of homes, maltreat.

ment of dead bodies by encouraging cutting of ears of Viet Cong. assassination assignments, and torture of POWA; but the law officer ruled others wise and the jury never head-the evidence. Ironically, two-days after Levy was released from prison, after serving most of a three-year sentence, seven Green Beret officers weres charged with the murder of a Vietnamese claimed to be double-agent. Levy's comment. on noticing the headlines was:
"As I was saving before I was so rudely interrupted."

The court-martial of L. Henry Howe in 1965 points sp the potential in the military justice system for suppression of political dissent. Howe was sentenced to one year for carry. ing a sign referring to "John. son's Fascist aggression in Vietoam is an off-post peace rally while off-duty and in civilian ciothes. His participation diff. not violate Army regulations. but he was convicted of "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" and uttering "cone. temptuous words against the President." The Court of Mistary Appeal's affirmance of Howe's conviction emphasized the power of the military to: punish dissent under vagnis crimes and the extremely limited application of the First; Amendment to servicemen.

Sherrill, Washington editor of the Nation, has done an exthe legalese to reveal the sign nificance of military justice proceedings and developments, and... his book is generally well-researched. However, he is not always completely conversal, with all aspects of the lead, subjects he treats and as and result, there is room for me

The book is admittedly partisan. But it is not shallow, and it provides a comprehensive view of the inequities in a system of law which is generally hidden from public view. It may be argued that unfairness. occurs in all systems of law, but Sherrill's account shows an alarming repetition of serious injustices in military law and, makes a powerful case for needed reform.

50-50 Hope for Reed And Knicks in Title

By Leonard Koppett

NEW YORK, May 8 (NYT).—One more game, with the key factor unknowable in advance—that's what the National Busketball Association championship has come down to, after 100 games played by the New York Knickerbockers and 99 by the Los Angeles Lekers, the last six against each other in the four-of-seven final round, The seventh game will be played tonight, at Madison Square Garden, and it may be decided by the condition of a long muscle in the right leg of Willis Reed, captain and center of the Knicks Reed was unable to play in Los Angeles Wednesday and the Lakers, who had lost despite Reed's early departure in Monday's game, evened the series with a 135-113 victory. Wilt Chamberlain i took full advantage of Reed's absence and scored 45 points, as the Lakers took command with a 36-10 first quarter.

No one could tell yesterday whether Reed would be "operational" for the showdown gama before another capacity crowd of It was fairly certain Reed would try. Dr. James Parkes, who rated Reed's chances as "50-50" earlier yesterday, had already explained that no long-range, serious reinjury was to be feared.

The problem was a muscle strain and the only real cure was The problem was a muscle state. Reed could make his normal passage of time. If, by game time, Reed could make his normal stabletic movements, he would be healed enough to play—and if he weren't healed enough, he wouldn't be able to move enough. It would be that simple.

Simple medically, that is. Competitively there were more uncertainties. If Reed were able to start, how long would he be able to continue? How effectively could he play? How soon might he burt himself again?

And, if Reed couldn't play at all, or play with partial effec-tiveness some of the time, how would the rest of the Knick game work? In the fith game, which Reed left with the Knicks 10 points behind, their gambling defense—trying for the ball at the risk of taking an opening or committing a foul—worked and brought tim victory. In the sixth, the gambles lost and the Lakers

Beyond all this lay the most unpredictable of all hasketball factors: shooting accuracy from outside. In this wonderfully intricate, but simultaneously simple game, a rash of long-shot baskets can overcome all other obstacles and a sudden failure to his the ordinary "good shots" can undo all other advantages. When a series boils down to one game, all the normal patterns, the famous "percentages," often become irrelevant.

Arts and Letters May Compete In Grand Prix de Saint-Cloud

WASHINGTON, May 8 (WP) - Owner Paul Mellon is "seriously considering" sending Arts and Letters to Paris to compete against Europe's best horses in the Grand Prix de Saint-Cloud on Simday, July 5, trainer Elliott Burch disclosed last night. "If all goes well, that is what we are planning." Burch said regarding summer plans for America's 1969 horse of the year.

"We feel Arts and Letters is the finest horse here and would like to give him a chance against the best over there." The Saint-Cloud race at 1 9/18 miles on the turf, is decided over comparatively level going and in a counter clockwise direction, unlike many rich French stakes which would require American borses to adapt to an undulating course and run in a direction opposite to what they are accustomed.

In the Saint-Cloud, 4-year-olds such as Arts and Letters would carry 134 pounds, the 3-year-olds 118. The winner earns more than

Unimpeachable Dick

WASHINGTON.-No one who has followed the events of the past two weeks can have auything but admiration for the political sagacity of Attorney General John Mitchell.

Mitchell's astuteness as a king-maker goes back to Miaml Beach, where he engineered the nomination of Richard M.

Nixon as the Republican candidate for President of the United States But it did not end there. In one of the smoke - fllled rooms that you

"One of the things we can't overlook," Mr. Mitchell said, "is that the people might want to impeach you, Dick, at some time early in your term." "I haven't even been elected set, and you're already talking about my impeachment," Mr. Nison protested.

We have to prepare for every contingency." Mr. Mitchell said. "Suppose you decide to widen the war in Indochina?" "But I've promised to end the war in Vietnam and bring our boys home." "We know what you've promised, Dick. But you may wish at some stage to go into Cam-

"Why that's ridiculous. Why would I do that?" Mr. Nixon "Perhaps to clean out the Communist sanctuaries once

Grammy Award

HOLLYWOOD, May 8 (UPI). -The Fifth Dimension was presented the "record of the year Grammy award last night for their recording of "Aquar-ius/Let the Sunshine In." The award was made by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences.

"Precisely what I said," Mr. Mitchell said.

"I don't want to be impeached." Mr. Nixon cried. "Not after all the work I put in to get the nomination." "You don't have to be, Dick. We have to make it impossible for them to take your job

"How do we do that?" "We have to select a Vice-President that the public will be so frightened of that they wouldn't dare impeach you."

"I never thought of that." Mr. Nixon admitted. "The best insurance a President could have would be to have someone standing in the wings that nobody could accept for the of-fice. Who fits the description?"

The attorney general took out a list. "We have a few people here that might fill the role. Strom Thurmond, Gov. Kirk of Florida, Gov. Reagan of California. Carl McIntyre of the Christian Anti-Communist Cru-sade. J. Edgar Hoover, and that guy from Maryland . . . what's-

"What do you mean what'shis-name?"

"I have it somewhere. Here it is. Spiro Agnew." "You have to be kidding. Whoever heard of Spiro Agnew?"

That's not the point. With television we can make him into a household name over-night. The question is, can he produce enough fear in the American electorate to keen it from impeaching you?"

"How do we know that?" Mr. Nixon asked.

"We don't know it," Mr. Mitchell replied. "But we've been talking to the guy, and he sounds like someone who can really ruffle people's feathers. If we send him out to fundraising dinners for a year and give him enough exposure, and let him say what he wants, no one in this country would dare impeach you."

As everyone knows, Mr. Nixon bought the idea, and last week when all the impeachment talk concerning President Nixon started, Attorney General Mitchell was the smuggest man in Washington. He called up the President and chuckled:

"That's another favor you

Mrs. Sean O'Casey: "He was a home man."

By Mary Blume

DARIS.—Sean O'Casey was, according I to Brooks Atkinson, "the most mag-nificent prose writer in the modern theater," and his plays are known from Rokomo to East Berlin. He had what he called "the exasperating honor" of being born in Dublin and he lived in voluntary exile in England for the last thirty-odd years of his life. The 90th anniversary of his birth fell, uncelebrated, last March. There is no O'Casey Literary Society.
"We'll start one, dear, you and I," said

Eileen O'Casey, the playwright's widow.

"He'd be very pleased." Mrs. O'Casey, a handsome woman with fine, lively eyes and an absurd notion that she is becoming elderly, was in France to visit such friends as Samuel Beckett and to see a new opera version of O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars." which she found very gracious though she rather missed the laughs. "One doesn't laugh at opera, my dear," she pointed out. "One just smiles."

An earlier attempt to put an O'Casey play to music. Marc Blitzstein's 1958 ersion of "Juno and the Paycock," was, Mrs. O'Casey says, a disaster. "Sean didn't want that as a musical," she added. "He wanted the money."

A member of the chorus of "Rose Marie" and one of Cochran's Young Ladies under the name of Eileen Carey, Mrs. O'Casey was born in England of Irish parents. Despite O'Casey's con-tempt for middle-class convention and for the church ("this boy prefers even the bowler to the biretta"), they were married in a Roman Catholic ceremony in Chelsea in 1937.

After their marriage, Eileen O'Casey briefly played Nora in a production of "The Plough and the Stars" ("which was foolish," she says. "I'd only done chorus and bits"). She hadn't yet met O'Casey when "The Plough and the Stars" had its tumultuous 1926 premiere in Dublin. Yeals reproached the rioting audience with a reference to the equally tumultuous opening of Synge's "The Playboy of the Western World," "You have," said Yeats, "disgraced yourselves again."

Later, Yeats was responsible for O'Casey's bitterest moment, when he criticized "The Silver Tassie" (1928). causing O'Casey's break with the Abbey Theatre and the family's more from Ireland.

"It was very sad-making," Mrs. O'Casey said. "G.B.S. was the one who stood by Sean, he thought Yeats was ridiculous Yeats was very special," she added, looking lofty. "That's what I like about Beckett I don't know if you can realize what an ordinary man he is."

O'Casey once wrote, "I wonder if Yeats ever peeled a spud." A day-laborer in his youth, O'Casey continued to work with his hands. He boasted a good deal about helping around the house. "His forte was washing up." says his wife. "And cartainly

Mrs. O'Casey lives in Hampstead in London, having decided against continoing to live in the country after her husband's death. "I'd have become an alcoholic." she says. "What would I do in the fall when all the trees are dripping?" Mrs. O'Casey is writing her memoirs, which Macmillan will publish in London. A large assortment of O'Casey papers was sold last year to the New York Public Library. 'We didn't keep everything, we had too many moves," Mrs. O'Casey said. "I also was very careless. It was only when Shaw told us halfway through our marriage to shove everything in card-board boxes that we started saving."

By many accounts. O'Casey could be an exasperating man. "People misjudged Sean," Mrs. O'Casey said. "He could be arrogant if he disliked you, but he was very kind. Truth was Sean's thing. What he thought was true, right or wrong, he had to stand by."

As the years went by O'Casey suffered from deteriorating eyesight and from the fact that productions of his plays were rare. Of course he was sad, says his wife "Year normal One thing shout wife. "He was normal. One thing about Sean, he was a normal human being. He was very quiet aboot it. I don't know how he went on writing." In his later years, he wrote charming long letters to young people who had written him about his work. I used to have a theory," Mrs. O'Casey said. "As he had so few productions, he had a manual need. All this letter writing may have been to have an audience. I used to say, how could he? Then I said, of course, he's very lonely for an audience."

Sean O'Casey died in 1964 at the age of 84. His last home was in Devon. "He was a charming man," said Mrs. O'Casey, "he was a home man. He really loved his home. His study was his home. The rest of the house was like the outside world. Another man might go out to a. restaurant, he would come out and mingle with us. "The daily used to have to go through his study at breakneck speed. Why is she touching that? When is she going to finish?' he'd say.

"With people he really loved, he'd say.

'Come into my room.' There he would relax. When he was in the nursing home at the end, he wanted to come back. Come back to his room."
